"Building the capacity of our farmers is crucial to boosting and strengthening their skills towards increasing productivity," said Roger Batkin, Board Chair of the Foundation. "Through the refined Call for Applications for Grant, we have increased our grant funds to support projects targeted at empowering farmers, equipping young people for viable careers in the agricultural industry and strengthening capacity and skill development for women and farming communities."

The Foundation is committed to a farmer-centric approach and impact-driven initiatives for a food-secure world. In alignment with both AGCO's purpose to deliver farmer-focused solutions to sustainably feed our world and the United Nations Sustainable Development Goal 4 on "Quality Education," the Foundation recognizes the importance of facilitating access to quality agricultural education and training programs that support agricultural transformation, enhancement of capacity building and skill development of farmers, including youth and women.

Through community investment software partner, Benevity, the Foundation grant application platform will run the CAG 2023 cycle from September 11, 2023, to October 13, 2023. The 2023 CAG strengthens the Foundation's commitment to its strategic focus areas and seeks proposals that increase the capacity of farmers, farming communities, young people and women. Grants will facilitate access to the resources, training, activities, and support farmers' needs to continuously improve their practices, build resiliency and improve their profitability and contribute to a food-secure world.

Grant eligible non-profit organizations must submit a proposal with a focus on "Pillar two: Agricultural Education and Innovation" and can only submit one application under this focus pillar.
